The percentage of inmates who are non-sentenced is at its highest point in history (66% of the ADP). A new record for this percentage has been set every year since 2000, and every Quarter of 2003. Ten years ago, only 53% of the ADP consisted of non-sentenced inmates. Of course, jail administrators have more flexibility with regard to sentenced inmates (for example, the changing of "time served percentages"). With a budgetary ceiling on jail capacity, and limited flexibility regarding the incarceration of non-sentenced individuals, the percentage of non-sentenced inmates will continue to rise.
